| 125.  | A Scene at Abbotsford (458) Engraved by C. Westwood  Engraved for the "Keepsake." Exhibited as "Youth and Crabbed Old Age never agree." When Mr. Landseer saw Maida, he was in the last stage of weakness and debility, as the artist has admirably expressed in his faded eyes and extenuated limb. He died six weeks afterwards. The other dog represented in the picture is a deerhound, given to the artist by the Dake of Athol. The picture was presented by the Duke of Bedford to William Adam, Esq., Lord Chief Commissioner of the Jary Court of Scotland. A sketch of the Maida alone belongs to Mrs. Spencer Bell. | 1828 |

| 3 60. | The Shepherd's Bible Engraved by Thomas Landseer  The owner's dog was for a long time a candidate for a picture by Sir E. Landeer, and died before it was painted. About two years afterwards he received a note naming a day for sitting. He had fortunately taken care to be provided with another dog in case the chance should occur, and he punctually kept the appointment. On mentioning the fact that the old favourite was dead, and giving a description of his colour and general appearance, Sir Edwin said, "Oh, yee, I know the dog exactly," and made an outline with a few touches that proved the fact. The picture was painted in two days, and the portraits are exact, especially the light-coloured dog, which was painted entirely from description. All who knew the original have remarked on seeing the picture, that not only in colour and attitude, but in the expression of his eye it is the dog himself. This subject was previously engraved the same size by C. G. Lewis. | 1858 |
